

Thursday, December 7, 2006

T1000/T2000 in review

The review at hardware.info starts with a comment which is certainly true: Within all the news about Intel and AMD, you might think that all other companies leaved the processor business. It's hard to speak agains marketeers who tout the addition of 200 MHz to a cpu as the next revolution of CPU technology. But this only by the way ....
In 8 processor cores on a chip they describe and explain the T1000/T2000 in some depth. A really interesting read. And i like comments like:No one can deny that Sun has hit a rough patch, but time and time again they don't fail to surprise the market with their well thought-out products. What Apple is for the desktop world, Sun is for networking and server solutions.

Posted by Joerg Moellenkamp in English, Oracle at 19:18