

Friday, January 19. 2007

Blame Enron

Apple will sell the 802.11n enabler for 1.99$ Can someone in the US please stop this universal excuse for many many moronic rules ... after all, SOX says only "CEO, sign your financial statement with blood, that it's correct". Okay, the CEO doesn't want to be sued and asks his or her CFO, who doesn't want to be sued as well. She or he ask a consulting company, which doesn't want to be sued as well: So you end with a maximum conservative, maximum play-safe set of rules, which upset everybody: Employees, executives and customers.

Posted by Joerg Moellenkamp in English, The IT Business at 07:25