Presentation for the Linuxtage 2009 in Graz

I've made my talk at the Grazer Linuxtage yesterday. At first i have to thank the hosts of the Linuxtage. The invitation to this event gave me the opportunity to fly over the Alps. In just one word expressions: Impressive, great, WOW. That was really, really great. Thank you for the invitation, Michael.

The event was great, too. Well, i did the Moelli Solaris Show (a good friend of mine call this presentations "Shock and awe" presentations). 180 Slides in just 50 minutes (okay, i had 45 minutes, but i exceed my time budget a little bit). As i had to speed over some slides i want to give you the slides here:

I think this presentation was a success. The room was almost full. Would say 30 people or so, but i'm bad at estimating numbers of peoples. I think the audience enjoyed it (comments are welcome).

The bar of Zotter chocolate as a thankyou for the presentators was a great idea. Helped me through the day Michael, when you need a presentator at your next event, don't hesitate to ask me.

BTW: That is valid to you all ... when you need a decent speaker about Sun or Solaris at your open source event ... you can ask me

PS: Constantin - I know that this is not the CI font in the preso, but i don't like this cheap Helvetica ripoff called Arial. I'm a Futura fan. In my opinion the best font ever made.)

Very interesting talk, indeed! At least it was yet another reason to finally take some time to dive into Solaris

Thanks for the nice feedback, Jörg! I'd love to welcome you on Grazer Linuxdays 2010 again.

BTW: There have been more than 30 people in your talk.

regards,
Michael
