

Friday, June 12. 2009

ISC'09 Student Event

This year, Hamburg is the location for an important event in the computing world: The International Supercomputing Conference '09. Obviously Sun participates at this conference. But there is an interesting event for students sponsored by Sun in relation to this conference: Do you study computer science (informatik), mathematics, life sciences, physical sciences, earth sciences, and just about any field that involves simulation, number crunching, and/or data processing (which is pretty much all of them) and you are interested in HPC? Then this announcement may be interesting for you. Sun is holding a student event/party at ISC'09 in Hamburg. It starts Saturday June 20th, 2009 at 19:00 and takes place at the Cafe Fees. Included: Food, Beer, Drinks, Music, T-shirts, & more. As the space is limited you should register for the event albeit you can register as well directly at the location at the evening.

By the way: I think it's on the "Planten und Blomen" side of Holstenwall, not at the "Inner City" side.

Posted by Joerg Moellenkamp in English, Oracle at 21:14