

Sunday, August 21. 2011

Froscon 2011

Yesterday i held my deduplication talk at the Froscon 2011. I think it was acceptable and the lecture room 3 was really filled. To be honest: I don't expected such an audience at that time. So a big thank you for all who attended the talk.

My talk started at 10:00 o'clock and thanks to apron parking, a rental car pickup in the feeled middle of nowhere in Düsseldorf and a larger traffic jam near Cologne led to an arrival at 09:58 ... with a presentation at 10:00 and the urgent need to visit the restroom before a disaster happens.

I had just a short time at Froscon ... i had a date with my house, that still needs work and don't accept when i'm saying "No ... not this weekend". And thus i was back in the rental car at 11:45 and was back in Lueneburg shortly after 15:00, ten hours after leaving home. 3.30h for 430km ... not that bad for an Opel Corsa.

However there is something i've recognized: I'm really missing standing in front of customers and technically interested people and trying to transfer my enthusiasm for technology. I'm really missing being on the road.

Posted by Joerg Moellenkamp in General at 17:08

Jörg: are You "officiali" blogging again (Y/N)?
Anonymous on Aug 21 2011, 19:07

Irrelevant.
Anonymous on Aug 21 2011, 19:37

Any slides or similar from your presentation?
Anonymous on Aug 22 2011, 21:22

I would be interested in some slides, too!
Anonymous on Aug 23 2011, 22:15

Can i have the foils please?
Anonymous on Aug 24 2011, 07:43

430km in a Corsa.. you're tougher than I thought. After such a trip I'd need a new backbone. At least the Corsas I've driven weren't really comfortable..
The time coordination problem sounds vaguely familiar to me..
Anonymous on Aug 29 2011, 12:45